

Qevero Modern Slavery Statement

Oct 4, 2026 · @Qevero

Our statement

Qevero has a zero-tolerance approach to modern slavery, human trafficking, forced labour and child labour in any part of our business or supply chain.

The statement requirement in section 54 of the Modern Slavery Act 2015 applies to larger organisations. We publish this statement voluntarily so that clients and public bodies can see where we stand.

Our business and supply chain

Qevero is a small digital marketing and web design consultancy. We provide website design, SEO and paid media services, mainly to small businesses. We are based in Norfolk, United Kingdom.

Our supply chain is made up mainly of software and online service providers, such as hosting, design and analytics tools. We run a paperless office and do not buy large volumes of physical goods.

Risk assessment and due diligence

We assess our risk of modern slavery as low, because our work is office-based and our suppliers are largely established software and technology providers. We keep that assessment under review.

To manage the risk, we:

- Pay everyone who works for us fairly and on time, and never use forced or compulsory labour.
- Check that new suppliers and freelancers are legitimate businesses before we engage them.
- Buy equipment from reputable suppliers.
- Make sure work experience placements are voluntary and educational, and that participants can leave at any time.

- Act promptly on any concern, including ending a relationship with a supplier where necessary.

Raising concerns

Anyone who suspects modern slavery in our business or supply chain can raise it internally. We will look into every concern promptly and treat it confidentially as far as we can.

The Modern Slavery and Exploitation Helpline, run by Unseen, is available on 08000 121 700.

Approval and review

This statement is approved by Jasper Sayer, Managing Director, and reviewed every year.
